

Strengthening the Euregional labour market in Life Sciences

Invitation to the third HR seminar Talent Creation and Retention

30th of September 2010 | 16.00-21.00
Interface Entreprises-Université de Liège

Needless to say that talented people are essential in the current knowledge industry. A real challenge for many companies to find, to develop and to keep their human capital. Jean Stéphane, Chairman and President of GlaxoSmithKline Biologicals and Jan Van der Vurst, specialist in leadership development of Kenaz, will do us the honour of sharing their experience and vision on these key strategic topics.

Jean Stéphane - Chairman and President, GSK Biologicals
- President of BioWin

For GSK Biologicals, one of the world's leading vaccine manufacturers, the task is immense. In Belgium alone, they work with 7000 people covering more than 40 nationalities. Furthermore we can learn from the way GSK Biologicals collaborates with local knowledge institutes and relatively small biotech companies.

Jan Van der Vurst - Specialist in leadership development, Kenaz
Dr. Jan Van der Vurst will focus on the topic of retention. He and his team guided already several clients in order to find adequate strategies to keep their teams in their most valuable configuration. Via case studies, he will give us insights in his recipe.

Program

- 16.00 Registration and coffee
- 16.30 Lectures + Questions and answers
- 19.00 Networking drink

Background

The Interreg IV project Skills³ aims at strengthening the Euregional labour market in Life Sciences. Therefore we have developed three workpackages.

HR seminar: learning from experts and colleagues about HR and the cross-border labour market;

Vividlinks.eu: career portal, making the Euregional labour market in Life Sciences transparent and accessible;

Master Classes: bringing high potentials and companies into contact.
